

PAOLO VACCARI HONORARY MEMBER OF A.I.S.P.

From the executive board of the Italian Association for Postal History, on Monday 16 March, the green light arrived. Thus, Paolo Vaccari was created honorary member of the prestigious Milanese society.

“The proposal - the president, Angelo Simontacchi, confirms - was approved unanimously; it is a recognition to the career, the competence and honesty of a true lover of the philatelic and postal world.”

“I thank the association very much. - Paolo Vaccari says - It is also thanks to the organized philately, and A.I.S.P. is a very good example, that we can make our sector, often difficult to understand without the right tools, known and loved by other people.”

“Having been created honorary member is a great satisfaction for me. I have known the association since its birth and, after opening my business as «studio filatelico» (1977), I was presented to A.I.S.P. by very important members, but I was not accepted, twice. Therefore, this recognition, received after more than thirty years of activity, is really gratifying, even more than if I had been accepted in the past.”

The aims of A.I.S.P. - stated in the association statute - are the study of postal history and its propagation. Born in 1966, the group gathers researchers and collectors to promote an exchange of ideas and information, besides cooperation. At present, the honorary members are seven: Paolo Bianchi, Carlo Giovanardi, Gianpaolo Guzzi, Adriano Landini, Anna Marazzini, Enrico Mazzucchetti and Paolo Vaccari.
